Dear Shareholders:

Stan A. Askren
Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer

The macroeconomic challenges we faced in 2008 were unprecedented. These challenges follow the difficult market conditions we confronted in 2006 and 2007. We have a proven track record of managing well through tough times, and in 2008 we responded with strength and agility, moving quickly to align our businesses with market realities while investing to improve our competitive capabilities and protect our long-term growth.

The collection of economic pressures in 2008 was of a scope and magnitude not seen since the 1930s. Unemployment was up; small business confidence and corporate profits were down. The mortgage crisis spread to collapse the credit market. New housing starts continued to decline, reaching historic lows. Steel and fuel costs experienced rapid, steep inflation before abating due to widespread economic weakness toward the end of the year.

Our management team has a track record of managing well through macroeconomic challenges. We are doing the right things to align our businesses with market realities and position the corporation for long-term success.

A year of meeting challenges and building for the future

Our decentralized split-and-focus business model is an advantage in times like these. All of our businesses operate very close to the markets they serve, giving management the ability to recognize and quickly react to challenges and opportunities.

Throughout the year, we made and implemented tough decisions necessary to adjust to harsh marketplace realities. We attacked structural and day-to-day operating costs in every corner of the corporation, including making painful but necessary reductions in staffing, working reduced hours and taking other actions to reduce labor costs. We took $140 million of costs out of the corporation in 2008. In the hearth business alone, we have reduced staff by approximately 40 percent and overall costs by more than $100 million during the past few years.

In our office furniture businesses, we completed the difficult task of closing our Richmond, Virginia, plant in 2008, consolidating production into other HNI facilities to generate substantial savings in 2009. We will continue to streamline our fulfillment model to improve efficiency and performance. As a result, we will see better lead times, lower costs and better customer service.

Our focus is never just to reduce costs. We worked hard throughout the year to build operational and competitive capabilities, continuously improving our ability to grow profitably when the economy cycles back. HNI members aggressively used our RCI (Rapid Continuous Improvement) process, holding more than 800 events across the company, identifying and implementing process improvements to enhance performance and drive efficiencies.

Despite the macroeconomic challenges, product development remains a top priority at HNI. Product leadership is key to enhancing our competitive position, both now and for the future. We are in the process of launching a record number of new products including Allsteel's Stride™ – a line of office furniture built on sustainable design and manufacturing, HON's SmartLink™ – a product family offering style, durability and a new level of flexibility for the school market, QuadraFire's EDGE 60™ – the hearth industry's first wood pellet burning fireplace, and numerous other fresh, exciting offerings.

Our focused selling model has driven steady growth in the government sector, making HNI the second-largest supplier of office furniture to the federal government. Our strong brand recognition, targeted sales tactics and ability to handle larger projects have contributed to double-digit compound annual growth in this sector for seven years running.

Our acquisitions completed and integrated over the past few years are performing well, including continued penetration of the Chinese market and international expansion at Lamex. Harman, the alternative fuel stove business acquired in 2007, performed above expectations in 2008.

Moving forward with confidence

The economic outlook remains volatile and uncertain for the foreseeable future. We will continue to respond to these conditions as we did in 2008 so we are well positioned when the economy improves.

HNI is the leader in the supplies-driven office furniture channel. This channel, which serves mainly small offices and individuals, was the first to feel a downturn, and we anticipate it will be the first to respond to improving economic conditions. We will continue to improve our position in this market with investments in new products, selling initiatives and e-commerce. Our investment in e-commerce will strengthen our links with customers, particularly small businesses, with highly efficient, easy-to-use tools.

In 2008, we bolstered our strong and growing position in the contract office furniture market with the acquisition of HBF, a leading provider of high-design seating, textiles, HNI people are a unique advantage for this corporation. Our members are tough, determined and talented—driven to improve our performance every day. They behave like owners because they are owners.

wood tables and case goods. With its strong brand image among interior designers and emphasis on new products, HBF is a perfect fit. We will continue to build our position in this market through exciting new products and a unique value proposition across all of our contract brands.

We have improved our market position in the hearth products industry even as we have downsized our business. We focus on two primary business segments: installing distributors in the new construction channel and specialty dealers that serve consumers. We have carefully aligned our organization and put systems in place to meet the specific needs of each of these business segments. With the hearth industry's strongest brands, best manufacturing capabilities and a unique ability to provide unparalleled service on a national basis, we will be well positioned when the housing market begins to recover.

In 2009, we are going to face even more difficult conditions. We will continue to reset our cost structure, leverage our split-and-focus model in line with market realities and identify growth opportunities.

We will continue to invest in new products and brand development. We will remain tightly focused on our core businesses with fewer and deeper priorities to ensure our long-term success.

I am optimistic about the future. HNI's leadership team is seasoned, having successfully managed our company through previous downturns. Our members share a culture of personal accountability and continuous improvement driven in large part by the fact that most of our members own stock and share in the profits. Our members behave like owners because they are owners. I would like to thank them for their dedication, efforts and sacrifice. I'm confident that HNI will emerge from this economic crisis stronger and more profitable than ever.

Sincerely,

Stan A. Askren
